Extremes: Life, Death and the Limits of the Human Body, Kevin Fong, Hodder & Stoughton, £ 8.99. Here is a series of reminiscences on the extremes that the human body can survive, written by someone trained both in space science and medicine. It's a racy read, but not a satisfying one. Early on, it tells the story of the skin with a detailed list of its functions, but excluding the repair and regeneration mechanisms and omitting salt excretion – both crucial.
